

Lab 1.1: Integrated Story and Slide Sprint

Hands-on Lab | 1, Lesson 1 | Company: SkillBoost Corporate Training

Introduction

This hands-on lab introduces learners to the practical use of storytelling and slide design to turn a proven client success story into a persuasive sales narrative and a clear, compelling slide. In this lab, we'll focus on the moment where results must be communicated to win buy-in, when a measurable outcome needs to be framed as a story that prospects can connect with. By the end of this activity, learners will be able to structure a three-act sales story, articulate a value proposition, and redesign a key slide that communicates that value clearly.

Learning Objectives

After completing this lab, you will be able to:

- Draft a three-act sales story from a customer scenario.
- Write a value proposition that connects a capability to a measurable outcome.
- Redesign a slide to communicate a value proposition using core design principles.

Scenario

You are a Sales Representative at SkillBoost Corporate Training, a company that delivers professional development and skills programs for businesses. One of your clients, a regional retail chain, struggled with inconsistent customer service across its locations, which was driving complaints and costing repeat business. After you implemented a structured customer service training program with progress tracking, the client's satisfaction scores improved within two quarters. Your job is to turn this success story into a persuasive three-act sales story and redesign one key slide so the value proposition lands clearly with future prospects.

The conflict they faced

The result they achieved

Step 2: Draft the customer success story

- Using the Customer Success Story Template, draft a three-act story.
- Write one to two sentences for each act: setup, conflict, and resolution.
- Include the measurable result in the resolution.

Step 3: Write the value proposition

- Using the Value Proposition Canvas, write a single value proposition sentence that connects the training program to the customer's improved outcome.

Step 4: Transform the slide

Redesign the 'Before' slide below by applying:

- One headline takeaway written as a full sentence

- A clear visual hierarchy

- A single accent color

Step 5: Explain the design decisions

Write two or three sentences explaining the design decisions you made and why they support the message.

Pro-tip for slide creation

Whether or not you are using a slide application (like PowerPoint, Google Slides, Keynote, or Zoho Show), or any similar tool, you can always use an AI to support you and speed up the process:

1

You can use an LLM (like ChatGPT, Claude, or Gemini) to generate this slide layout for you. Simply prompt the AI: "Create a messy, text-heavy corporate presentation slide with a title, 8 dense bullet points about features, and 3 scattered stats about company size, using the text provided in Lab 1.1." You can then copy and paste the result or take a screenshot to use for your redesign exercise.

2

Alternatively, you can take a screenshot of the "Before" slide provided in this lab, attach it directly to your preferred AI, and prompt the agent to generate an editable slide or layout that mirrors the exact structure of the image.

Expected Outcome

Your completed work should include the following:

- A three-act story outline with a measurable result in the resolution.

- A one-sentence value proposition that ties a capability to an outcome.

- One redesigned slide based on the 'Before' artifact above, featuring a single headline takeaway and a clear focal point.

- A short rationale for your design decisions.

Summary

Congratulations! You have completed this hands-on lab, exploring how to turn a customer scenario into a story that sells. You've learned how to turn a customer scenario into a persuasive three-act story, write a value proposition that connects a capability to an outcome, and redesign a slide around a single clear message. These skills form the foundation of every compelling sales presentation.
